

Alcohol and other drugs at the primary care interface - Tasmanian Project ECHO

Join our AOD Project ECHO program designed to empower primary care providers in delivering more effective alcohol and other drug care to their patients.

This collaborative learning program offers practical guidance on prescribing and treatment options, managing withdrawal, navigating referral pathways, and integrating AOD care into everyday practice.

Participants will connect with specialists and peers, explore real case studies, and build confidence and capability in managing AOD-related issues within their communities.
